Historic constitution vote Tues.

Canyon and Randall County voters will take a historic vote on a new constitution for Texas Tuesday.

Eight propositions, all of which, if passed, would replace the current 1876 Constitution, are on the ballot in both English and Spanish for voters.

The much-debated new constitution, which was constructed by state legislators in convention in spring 1974, is not expected to draw more than 20 percent of the 30,000 registered voters in Randall County to the polls.

County Clerk LeRoy Hutton has predicted a turnout of between 10 and 20 percent, based on the number of absentee ballots cast through Friday. A total of 231 persons cast absentee ballots, more than have been cast in a special off-year election at least since 1969.

Off-year elections traditionally draw far fewer than 20 percent of the registered voters in the county, according to Hutton.

Polls in all precincts in the county will open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m. Tuesday for the balloting. Spanish-language interpreters will also be available at each polling place to explain the ballot.

Ballots will be of the punch-card variety and will be counted by the West Texas State University computer following the closing of the polls.

The eight propositions voters will consider in the election have been hotly debated in two sessions locally sponsored by Randall County commissioners. In addition, several county officials have already announced a stand on the vote.

Randall County Judge Woody Pond announced Friday afternoon he opposes all eight propositions, saying he could not support even one of the ballot proposals.

Mrs. Audrey Bruse, county tax collector, earlier this fall joined a state-wide steering committee opposing passage of the propositions.

Bob McClendon, county treasurer, has said he favors passage of at least one proposition on the ballot — that which pertains to local government. McClendon ran on a platform a year ago that he would try to abolish his office if elected. He feels the new constitutional article would allow that.

County commissioners themselves are scheduled to consider Monday whether to pass a resolution urging local voters to vote against the propositions or another resolution urging local voters to vote their consciences on the matter.

Other county officials have not taken a stand on the ballot propositions.

Brochures to go to all taxpayers in CISD

Publicity effort for new schools to begin

Canyon School District taxpayers and voters will be deluged with material this month to inform them on the issues involved in a Dec. 9 bond issue election which will decide whether two new schools will be built in the district.

Members of a school board-appointed publicity committee took action Thursday night to begin preparing mail-out material, brochures and letters, and signs.

All the material will be prepared to inform local voters on the costs, the locations, the needs and the proposals for the construction of a new elementary school and a new high school in the north part of the school district.

Canyon School Board members have called a bond election for Dec. 9, but have not yet discussed actual costs involved in the new school construction.

However, the bond election, if successful, is expected to authorize the issuance of between $5 and $6 million in bonds to finance the new school construction.

Publicity committee members Thursday night agreed to take action to mail out brochures and to set up town hall meetings this month to explain to taxpayers and voters the issues involved in the bond election.

A subcommittee is to begin design of a brochure, explaining the pertinent facts about the election, which will be mailed during Thanksgiving week to every taxpayer in the district.

A town hall meeting, where local board members and other officials can explain first-hand the problems which led to the decision to call a bond election, has tentatively been scheduled for the first week in December prior to the election date.

In addition, members of the committee are to investigate the possibility of purchasing or acquiring space on outdoor billboards around Canyon to promote the passage of the bond election.

Mrs. Ruth Holladay, who heads the committee, explained Thursday night that the school district has already been offered the use of one outdoor advertising sign for the period prior to the bond election.

Another committee will investigate the use of portable outdoor billboards to promote the election.

Mrs. Holladay said she will prepare a lenghty question and answer sheet, several copies of which will be mailed to each publicity committee member. In addition, she said, the newspaper will be asked to run several of the questions and answers in each edition prior to the election.

The questions and answers will deal with the costs of the proposed project, projected enrollments and other such matters.

Mrs. Vondean McGregor, a committee member, was appointed to begin contacting local supporters of the bond election to collect funds for advertising space in the newspaper to promote the bond election.

During the past month, Mrs. Holladay and Mrs. McGregor have been showing to civic groups and other clubs a slide presentation on the Canyon school system to point up the needs for new buildings.

Mrs. Holladay said as of Thursday night the slide show had been presented to 900 people in the Canyon area.

Project virtually assured

Umbarger families want water

Thirty-nine Umbarger families have pledged their support for a new water system for their community and now they await word from the federal Farmers Home Administration to make the system a reality.

Louie Raef, Umbarger Community Association leader, reported Thursday he and other leaders in the water system effort have collected $150 from each of the 39 families to get underway the procedure for establishment of a pure-water system in the community.

Bill McMorries, of McMorries and Associates, an Amarillo engineering firm, said the number of families pledged to tie onto the proposed system should be more than enough to assure the FmHA that the community is serious about the request for grant and loan funds for the project.

The community has asked the FmHA to provide $75,000 in grant funds for the system and $75,000 in loans for the project. The loan would be paid off by monthly fees charged system customers.

McMorries said he hopes to submit to FmHA officials Monday an initial feasibility study on the project, including the fact that the 39 families have committed themselves to financial participation in the system.

He hopes the FmHA will allocate funding for the project within a month. If so, he said, the project could begin next summer.

The system originally designed by McMorries for Umbrger calls for a central pure-water well with water lines running from the well to individual homes and businesses in the community.

McMorries met with Umbarger residents two weeks ago to outline the program and to get an initial response on the project. At that time 26 persons said they would pay $150 to get on the system.

McMorries told them at that time it would take more than 35 participants to ensure the system's success.

With 39 participants the montly cost for the system and for repayment of the $75,000 loan could be between $12 and $14 per customer.

If the FmHA approves the project, the funding would go to a non-profit corporation with stockholders the users of the system. The corporation would then run the system and pay off the loan.

McMorries is to be back in Umbarger for a 7:30 p.m. meeting Tuesday with all Umbarger residents interested in the system. The meeting will be at the school gym.

Effort seen for schools aid

State Sen. Max Sherman told a school citizens committee Thursday there will be an effort in the next legislative session to increase the amount of state money going into local school districts.

Sherman, guest speaker at a noon meeting of the Canyon School District Vocational Education Advisory Committee, said educational financing will be another key item for legislators in 1977 and he anticipates some moves to increase the state funding of local districts.

A bill passed in the 64th Legislature last spring decreased state support of local districts, he said, and impacted seriously on many school districts in the Panhandle.

(In Canyon ISD, local taxpayers were required to pick up an additional $150,000, a figure which will be doubled for 1976-77.)

But, Sherman cautioned that should the state increase its financing of local districts, local districts should anticipate more state control.

Covering a broad spectrum of subjects during his luncheon session, Sherman anticipates no tax bill in the 1977 legislature and he does not foresee the levy of a state

Schools costs due decision

The architect, the financial advisor and the school board are to come together Tuesday night to, for the first time, get down to the solid analysis of exactly how much construction of two new schools will cost.

Bob Davis of Columbian Securities Corporation and B.R. Cantrell of Cantrell and Associates, architectural firm, are to meet with the board to go over the projected cost figures for construction of a new elementary and new high school building.

During the past year, board members have indicated the bond issue would probably run between $5 and $6 million.

Supt. Jerry Jacobs said Friday the schoolboard is not expected to discuss how much taxes in the district will have to rise to pay for the bond issue.

However, a tentative bonded retirement schedule presented by Davis to a school committee earlier this fall calling for the issue of $4.5 million in bonds indicated the tax rate for bonded indebtedness would nearly double with an issue of that amount.

Davis has said the district cannot issue more than $4.5 million in bonds because the district assessed valuation is too low.

Cantrell has told board members in previous meetings the district will be lucky to build a new school for $30 per square foot.

Jacobs said the figures on how much taxes will have to rise to pay off the bonds will be available later in the week following the Tuesday night session.

School board members have already called a bond election for Dec. 9, when voters will go to the polls to consider the issuance of

Red tape strings up car donation effort

Three months ago, the management of Stevenson Motor Co. decided to donate a heavily damaged but new car to the Canyon High School auto mechanics class. Now, it looks like it may take a new state law before the donation can be made.

In the interim, Curtis Lehnick, service manager for the firm, has tried with frustration and humor to poke through a quagmire of problems to give the car to the CHS class.

He hopes the problem may be solved this week, but if it isn't, Sen. Max Sherman says he may have to introduce legislation in 1977 to solve the problem.

It all started when Stevenson received a heavily-damaged new car back in August, and Lehnick decided the automobile might make a good training aid for the high school mechanics class.

But, Lehnick learned first off that Buick Motor Division wouldn't donate the car to the school district unless absolutely assured the car wouldn't be used as a car, that it would be used only as an aid.

So, Lehnick contacted Dr. Ken Hart, vocational education director here, and Hart contacted Supt. Jerry Jacobs, Sen. Sherman and Rep. Bob Simpson.

Each of those four wrote letters to Buick pledging the car would not be used as a motor vehicle.

But, a state law, in the meantime came into view, which indicates the district cannot accept the donation unless it is a motor vehicle.

Buick's legal staff has looked into the matter and Lehnick is hoping for word on the situation this week.

The car has been held in Amarillo until the matter can be cleared up, but Lehnick fears that if the matter isn't settled soon the car may go to a school district in Oklahoma, where the law allows such a donation.

"This is the first time I've received a car of this type in my 25 years," Lenhick said. "It may be that long again and I hate to lose this one."

Amarillo ambulance firm not sure on city branch

The manager of Amarillo's Metropolitan Ambulance Service has been approached by Randall County officials to research the possibility of assuming ambulance service operations in Canyon, but he said Friday he's not yet made a decision on the matter.

Calvin Guengerich said his firm is "considering it," but no decision has yet been reached. He expects a decision within the week.

County Commissioner John Fulgenzi said Friday he had talked with Guengerich about the possibility of Metropolitan providing ambulance service for Canyon and hoped to hear a decision before the regular meeting of county commissioners on Monday.

Randall commissioners are withholding approval of an increase in monthly supplement and an advance in supplement to continue the operations of the Canyon Ambulance Service until an answer is received from Metropolitan.

And, South Randall County Hospital Board members have also delayed a decision on whether to up their monthly supplement to the local ambulance firm until Randall County commissioners make a decision on the matter.

Richard Bertrand, owner and operator of Canyon Ambulance Service, has said the delays by the two govermental entities on the supplement decision will not have an immediate impact on the operations of his business.

Fulgenzi and Commissioner Dee Griffin were appointed two weeks ago to approach Metropolitan about putting ambulance service in Canyon, after commissioners discussed the supplement hike asked by Canyon Ambulance Service.

Canyon City Commissioners have already voted favorably to increase the supplement and to advance supplemental funds to pull the service from a financial slump.

With or without a decision from Guengerich, county commissioners are scheduled Monday to discuss the ambulance service.

They are also to consider passage of one of two proposed resolutions dealing with the proposed new Texas Constitution.

County Judge Woody Pond said Friday commissioners will consider both resolutions and can vote for either.

Both were authored by the judge and both express the objection of commissioners, either as a group or individually, to passage

Downstate suit stymies voter notification

A federal lawsuit filed last week to block implementation of the new Texas Voter Registration Act will delay action in Randall County by the county tax collector in informing local voters they must register to vote before Jan. 31.

Mrs. Audrey Bruse, local tax assessor-collector, said Friday she will not mail to the 30,000 registered voters in the county letters as she had originally planned, notifying them to re-register to vote or face having their names pulled from voter registration lists.

She said she will delay action on the new law, which was passed by the 64th Legislature last spring, until a settlement is reached in the suit filed last week by the Texas Civil Liberties Union and the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund.

The suit, filed downstate and naming all Texas voter registration officials as defendants, seeks an injunction to block implementation of the new law, which requires that voters re-register by Jan. 31 or have their names pulled from voter lists.

Letters are to be mailed under the law to registered voters by the tax collector notifying them of the change after the Tuesday special constitutional amendment election.

Mrs. Bruse said she will await formal notice of what to do from Secty. of State Mark White before she begins mailing letters to local voters.

Propositions merit local voter approval

Randall County voters would be best served by passage of all eight propositions of the Tuesday ballot.

The new Texas Constitution merits approval because:

*The new document is far more brief, far more readable and far less complex than the current constitution of 1876. It has just over 15,000 words, compared to an older document with 60,000 words. It is written in laymen's language.

*It allows the Legislature to meet annually, in odd-numbered years for a regular session of 140-days, and in even-numbered years for a session of 90 days. The Texas Research League reports that annual sessions could save millions in taxpayer dollars. West Texas State University officials know first-hand the frustrations involved in trying to prepare budgets three years in advance as mandated under the old Constitution.

*It gives the governor the responsibility for budget control, and strengthens the governor's ability to control state spending.

*It provides that every state agency must justify its existence every decade or lose its appropriation.

*It provides for a judiciary system in which court dockets could be balanced, where speedy trial might become more a reality than a bad joke.

*It provides mandated tax exemptions for the elderly. It provides mechanisms for equalizing the taxes levied in any one county against property by the various taxing jurisdictions.

*It puts into the hands of the people the potential for the tailoring of county government to meet specific county needs. County government becomes truly a local government.

*It gives to the legislature, the legitimate representative organism for the people in this representative democracy, specific guidelines on how to implement laws. It does not fiddle, to any great extent, in the statue-making business itself.

*Because the legislature is empowered to legislate creatively, the new Constitution can be a living document, growing with Texas and adjusting to circumstances as they come.

A vote for the entire document, of course, will constitute an act of faith on the part of Texas and Randall County voters. A vote against the document will conversely be an act of fear.

Rational fear cannot be based, in this instance, wholly upon the unknown nature of the new Constitution. It is easily read and easily understandable.

Rational fear can be based on reality, however. It could be based, for example, on a simple extrapolation of what government Texans will continue under should the document be defeated at the polls.

If we continue under the 1876 Constitution, we in Texas will continue to have a county government which cannot respond to growth and change; we will continue to have a judiciary which moves at a snail's pace; we will continue to have a governor whose job is so demanding that he need not show his face in Austin for months at a time; we will continue to have state officials groping into the future to find figures to submit budget proposals three years in advance; we will continue to have our property appraised at wildly varying values by two or three taxing jurisdictions in our counties; we will continue to have a legislature which, in an effort to meet change, must peruse so many bills in such a short period of time that legislation is half-baked, sophomoric and, in some cases, irrelevant; we will continue to spend $100,000 every other year to add more and more amendments to a document which has already been amended 220 times; we will continue to view the Constitution as an obscure bit of verbiage embodied in three large volumes which can be understood only by an attorney.

In short, we fear the perpetuation of the current Constitution. Because we have seen it at work in the past.

What then to hang our faith on?

For one thing, we can read and understand the proposed new Constitution. We can rationally peer into the future and see what its implications are.

For another, we trust in men of good will like Max Sherman, who himself believes in the new document.

Randall County voters should take faith and fear with them into the voting booth Tuesday — faith in the future and fear of the Constitution of the past. — C.W.

Briscoe exists, but never says anything

Felton West, chief of the Houston Post capital bureau, figures he's discovered how come so many people have been confused about exactly where the governor of this state stands on various issues, not the least among them the new proposed Texas Constitution.

"Dolph Briscoe," West writes, "the governor of Texas, has an exact look-alike twin whose existence has never before been disclosed."

West avers that Briscoe's twin actually campaigned for the governor, making progressive-sounding speeches around the state about the need for change in government, and that the twin, again taking the progressive stance, was actually inaugurated, after election.

But, the real Briscoe surfaces every once in awhile, West contends, and makes such pronouncements as the recent objection to the entire new proposed Constitution, which voters will either approve or turn down Tuesday.

While we think West may be onto something, and we certainly wouldn't want to discourage any investigation into his allegation, we feel the real problem is a little less complex.

Briscoe is actually an old line, Bill Heatly-type Texas politician, a Bible-thumping, commie-hating, apple-pie consuming, politician of the old, old school, a school which has run Texas politics so long we've forgotten politicians can speak without raking out Genesis, citing the scourge of communism, and warning of personal income taxes.

They had the likes of Briscoe, Frank Erwin, Heatly and a whole host of other Texas politicians in mind when they coined the word "demogogue."

Take Briscoe's press statement, which came in the morning mails for immediate release, concerning his opposition to the new Constitution. It's on the desk here and we invite you to come by and try to find, within the six double-spaced pages of rhetoric, one syllable of concrete fact to back up any objection made against the proposed document.

What we have in Briscoe's statement is six pages of "I am opposed to (fill in the blank)." Briscoe is convinced of much, as the statements in the six-page explanation show, but he's unable or unwilling to share with us why he's convinced of it.

It's the same sort of bunk which is broadcast over the Southwest from XROC Radio on the Mexican border. As the preachers on XROC have turned religiion into baseless nonsense, so have Briscoe and others of his ilk turned politics into the exclamation of drivel.

Which wouldn't be so bad, except that we keep electing these same folks to public office over and over again. — C.W.

Solution for crime is solution for all

Irrelevant-but-funny Department:

In the wake of an upsurge in violent robberies of convenience food stores in Amarillo last week, that city's police chief is quoted as suggesting that a possible partial solution to the robbery problem might be the closing of many of the convenience food stores which now stay open all night. Thus, he reasons, police could patrol more effectively those few all-night stores which remain open.

We think the police chief has hit upon a fine idea. We might, for example, extend his logic and close down all area banks, concluding, of course, that with no banks there will be no bank robberies. We might also close down all schools, just so there wouldn't be any absences.

Just as Prof. Brent Lynch has said in the past and reiterated in Amarillo last week, the secret to good crime control is good police work. The secret, obviously, is not to make business and industry cut back or close down to reduce numerically the number of crimes perpetrated against them.

The police chief might be better served and might better serve his two-county community by looking inward for a solution. — C.W.

Society, status and Brother John's solution

By CARROLL WILSON

It is an astounding sociological event when a significant number of Americans mature to a level where they can shed themselves of the what's-good-for-General-Motors - is - good - for - the - USA philosophy which has pervaded the country since the industrial revolution.

A measure of just how mature we have become is manifested in the current number of Car and Driver magazine, a slick publication which extolls the virtues of low and sleek automobiles and all the fun you can have in them. Editor Stephan Wilkinson lays aside self-interest (11 major auto firms took out full-page, full-color ads in the October issue, for example) to call on consumers to change their attitudes about the Detroit-induced new-car mania.

"Why should we spend all that money to buy a car, use it for a few brief years and then throw it away? We could conceivably live with it, maintain it, change it and enlarge it to suit our growing needs — or exchange it with someone who already has one that more nearly suits our purpose. Sure, we'd eventually put a lot of autoworkers out into the street, but we'd also create a huge industry of fixers, servicers and parts-builders, just as we already have carpenters and plumbers to take care of our homes," Wilkinson writes.

That we may consume ourselves out of existence is not only possible, but probable, I might add.

But, good grief, isn't Wilkinson going a bit too far?

The automobile, that chrome-wheeled, white-side-walled, candy-apple, metallic-colored, nylon-and-leather, 120-mph manifestation of the modern personality, is, for the middle classes, forced as they are to live, in the words of Pete Seeger, in little ticky-tacky houses, the ultimate status symbol.

And, unless I've sadly misread humanity, it appears that in a world that wants to level mankind, individual men will strive harder to gain identity, to flaunt their status once achieved.

Eliminate the new and flashy car as the middle class status symbol and what in the world will the high school super-stud do to turn the girls' heads?

Will John Public give up without a fight the triennial surge in status which comes as he opens the garage door to reveal his new super-machine to a gawking neighbor still driving last year's model?

You might as well try to wean us from Coors and the Dallas Cowboys.

Status symbols, I would argue, will become even more visible and even more a necessity for Americans as the trend toward egalitarianism develops.

While our houses now are pretty much the same, our clothes, too, have taken the turn toward the common denominator. The September issue of Men's Wear magazine notes in a feature article that denim, once the dress only of cowboys, is to be the future king in men's fashion. The editors expect 550 million square yards of denim to be produced this year and they expect the 10 to 15 percent increase in production and sales experienced over recent years to continue into the future.

If we are to all wear blue jeans and all to live in ticky-tacky, how are we to express our individuality, a necessity I contend for this discussion, or our status?

If the automobile, as Mr. Wilkinson suggests, should become as our homes, mere copies of our neighbors, won't that make the effort to exert status even more difficult?

Brother John, a Honda driver who lives in a square-shaped middle-class home and wears the uniform blue every day, thinks he's come up with a solution.

"What we need," I told him the other day during a break in the Cowboys game, "is a substitute for the car, something which would show our status but not cost so much money and not be so costly to the environment."

"The key here," John said concisely (he always gets to the heart of the matter), "is money. We want people to know, but we really don't want to tell them outright, that we make more money than the next fellow."

"And," John continued, "we do that by showing our neighbors that we have more money to throw away on fancy cars than they do."

"Yes," I said.

"Therefore," he said, "our prosperity and its proportional status is measured by the amount of money we can afford to spend for frivolity, a new and a fancy car being more expensive, but not necessarily more useful, than a plain car, or an old car."

"The Indians," I interjected with a check-mate smile.

"Precisely," John said. "If our status is based in reality on how much we can afford to waste, it is only logical that we incorporate in our culture the old potlatch concept. We've got it in disguise anyway."

"A much more honest approach, I'll admit," I said. "We just recognize that status is linked to waste and not conservation, to selfishness rather than generosity."

"You've got it," he said, and jumped to his feet, gathering into the middle of his living room his rifle collection, his picture of an antelope, his wife's homegrown plants, three dining room chairs, 45 books, two rugs, 14 rolls of toilet paper and one tube of toothpaste.

He was trying to move his Honda into the living room when I stopped him.

"What in the world are you doing, John," I asked with a bit of hysteria in my voice.

"We get this thing started by example," he said. "You call the newspapers and television stations. I believe in beginning at home."

And he lit a match and touched it to the corner of his Honda car-owner's maintenance manual.

We moved the other two dining room chairs out on his front lawn and sipped a few suds while his home went up in flames.

John's neighbor, smelling the smoke, ran over to us from next door.

"What the heck's going on?" he screamed as we sat and he tried to hook up the lawn hose.

"That's status," John said smugly to his neighbor. "Top that, buster."

Our world

Are we really free?

BY ANN BROWN

Almost 200 years ago, 13 poorly organized colonies fought for their freedom against the foremost world power — and won.

The colonies became the United States, and nearly 100 years later, the states fought among themselves to determine whether the states were autonomous or the federal goverment controlled them.

The states lost, and the federal government has extended its control to the counties, communities and individuals.

Counties and cities are told how they must be zoned.

Communities are told how to run their schools.

Parents are told where they must send their children to school, and what they must be taught.

Landlords have no choice as to the tenants who occupy their property.

Business people are so oppressed by federal regulations, many of them are driven out of business, and others are driven out of their minds.

Federal laws prevent people from protecting their property or their persons.

The police are so shackled by federal regulations, lawbreakers are far more fearful of private citizens than they are of a policeman.

When the Albuquerque police went on strike many people were terrified they would be overrun by thugs. On the contrary, the city was much quieter than usual.

The thieves and cutthroats did not want to run afoul of irate civilians, who were not so inhibited by federal regulations.

Abraham Lincoln declared at Gettysburg that America would have a new birth of freedom, "and that government of the people, by the people, and for the people shall not perish from the earth."

Do we have government of the people when at least 90 per cent of Americans violently oppose busing children away from the neighborhood schools, yet the buses roll on?

Do we have government by the people when criminals are coddled, defended and protected literally at the expense of the people they prey upon?

Do we have government for the people when there are more government employees than there are workers in the private sector who support them?

Are a people free when half their earnings are taken from them to support a cumbersome government bureaucracy and hosts of people who refuse to work?

Every American should take the time to read the charges brought against the king of Great Britain in the Declaration of Independence.

The very first charge was that "He has refused his assent to Laws, the most wholesome and necessary for the public good."

Does any American think it is either wholesome or necessary for the public good to frustrate public school children, teachers, and parents almost out of their minds?

Is it for the public good to allow the criminal minority to prey upon the law-abiding majority practically unhindered?

The king was also charged with "imposing taxes on us without our consent."

How many taxes does the average worker pay that he feels is vastly unfair?

Does the modern American lack the courageous fortitude of his forefathers?

Have we been oppressed into submission or lulled to sleep?

Or have we forgotten that we are children of the King, with the divine right to freedom?

Letter To The Editor

Ann Brown on women too much for reader

Dear Editor:

I have for several years noticed the column by Ann Brown and have refrained from comment many times, but this time proved too much. I demand equal time to point out one or two facts.

Since Genesis was used, lets start with that. Genesis 2:18 "I will make him a helper fit for him." and Gen. 2:24 "... and they become one flesh." In no way do I interpret that to mean that man (or woman) is superior to the other. But as the wings of a bird, they must balance in harmony, consult with and help each other. To say that "the creator decreed that the husband should earn the living, and the wife should bear the children and be subject to her husband," is poor interpretation of Gen. 3:14-19, and is obviously personal opinion, unless she was there and heard God herself.

Also, Mrs. Brown assumes too much, that all men and women are of her school of thought and church. I am of neither and don't believe that those who don't follow my thought or her thought will end up in hell. For our own Declaration of Independence declares "the separate and equal station to which the Laws of Nature and of Nature's God entitle them, a decent respect to the opinions of mankind . . ." and of "certain unalienable rights, that among these are Life, Liberty, and the pursuit of Happiness."

And this holds true for women as well as men, that both are created equal and entitled to the same rights and privileges, and if one woman is happy being a housewife and mother, then God bless her, and if another woman would rather work with the men, then God bless her also, if she enjoys what she is doing. At our house, my wife and I reached a compromise early in marriage. She makes all of the little decisions and leaves the big ones to me, and fortunately, I have not yet had to worry about making a decision, as there has not been one that she couldn't handle. And I am neither henpecked, nor is she submissive, for we have tried to build our marriage on a foundation of affinity, friendship, unity and life, which is what marriages should be built on. For marriage has two wings, a man and a woman, and for it to fly, they must fly together, in unison.

(Written by C.W.J. Lowndes, who came from England in 1866 and worked on the T-Anchor as a cowboy and later as bookkeeper.)

The following excerpt is taken from The Randall County Story, which was compiled by the late Grace Warwick:

In compliance with your request that I give you some idea of the first "horseless carriage" I drove or, rather sailed over the prairie, I am pleased to tell what I can recollect about this:

The ship sailed perfect with the wind astern or on the beam but of course would not sail very close to the wind as the wheels I used were somewhat worn which acted more or less as a brake when going windward.

As to the construction of the "boat" I was helped very materially by Al Hammond, a good blacksmith on the T-Anchor Ranch. We used the wheels of an old buckboard fastened under a frame of one inch board. The mast was stepped about even with the front axle, the sails were a mainsail and jib, and mainsail rigged with a boom and gaff hoisted with peak and throat halliard just as in a boat, the jib attached to a bowsprit rigged out in front about three feet long and hoisted through a pulley on the mast over the mainsail.

Perhaps this cut may give you some idea as to what the "vessel" looked like.

Mr. Lowndes said the sail-ship went so fast it scared him.

He and Mr. Wallace used to go on "cruises" together over the plains.

(Today we begin a weekly horoscope compiled and provided by one of the world's great seers. But, because of space limitations, we intend to run only three signs each week and each week's sign commentary will be for a one-month period. — C.W.)

AQUARIUS: Jan. 20-Feb. 18 — You are creative and optimistic in November. Keep smiling and hope your prevarications won't be found out. A practical and persistent person, don't be dissuaded because people think you are bull-headed and stubborn. Because your peers view Aquarians as flaky, you should apply yourself to an inventive reassertion of your stability.

PISCES: Feb. 19-March 20 — Disregard your paranoid tendencies. Hopefully, your mate will understand, anyway. Don't overwork during November — your boss doesn't intend to promote you.

ARIES: Try to start at least one day this month without forgetting your tie or belt. Take heart, most Ariens forget their shoes at least twice a month. Semi-annual bathing will help you win friends and influence potential clients.

Vote. . .

County in the state legislature, and Sen. Max Sherman, who also represents this area in Austin, have both said they favor passage of all eight propositions.

Sherman and Simpson have both spoken in Canyon meetings on the advantages of the document. Most recently, Simpson was part of a debate on the issue Thursday night here.

Propositions on the ballot include the following, with accompanying brief summaries of each proposition (information prepared by the Texas Legislative Council):

Proposition 1

Proposition 1 on the ballot will include revisions of the article dealing with the separation of powers, the Legislative and Executive branches of government.

One of the more controversial issues in the proposition is the question of annual sessions for the legislature. Currently, the legislature meets every other year for a 140-day session. The new revised constitution would provide for annual sessions, with an additional 90-day session. The legislature could also meet in a special 15-day session to consider a governor veto.

The power of the governor to appoint state agency appointed members for aligned terms is one of the more controversial features of the proposed executive article. Currently, the governor has no constitutional power to align the terms of appointed members. Proponents of the article have contended the article would give greater power to the governor. Opponents say the legislature has the real power. The proposition would also require that the governor could not serve more than two four-year terms consecutively.

In addition, the article provides the governor with the responsibility for budget review and control of appropriations when the legislature is not in session.

A major feature of the article provides that every decade state agencies must be reviewed for performance and must justify their spending levels. The legislature could review the agencies and not renew the life of agencies which could not prove their worth.

Proposition 2

Proposition 2 calls for the merger of the Texas Supreme Court and the Court of Criminal Appeals. Currently, the supreme court is the state's highest court in civil matters and the court of criminal appeals is the highest court in criminal matters. Under the revised document, a unified judiciary would be mandated with courts of criminal appeals merged with courts of civil appeals for intermediate courts of appeals.

The proposition also calls for the supreme court to provide administration for the court system.

Proposition 3

Proposition 3 would concern revision of voter qualifications and election provisions. The article would allow the legislature to set residency requirements for voting and would lower the voting age to 18 in Texas in line with the federally-mandated voting age of 18. In addition, it would give convicted felons who are not in prison, on probation or parole, the right to vote.

Proposition 4

Proposition 4 would revise the education provisions of the Constitution. Under the revised document, Texas would be committed to providing equal educational opportunity to all students. The document retains the permanent university fund for financing improvements at Texas A&M and in the University of Texas System.

It would also establish a higher education fund for colleges not in the A&M or UT systems.

Proposition 5

Proposition 5 generally revised the finance provisions of the current Constitution. Generally, the proposition retains the same features found in the current constitution. Certain items are exempted specifically from taxation — agriculture machinery, parts, fertilizer, feed or seeds, drugs and medicine, and food. Specific exemptions are also provided for the elderly and others now included under the current constitution.

The article would continue the principle of "pay-as-you-go" state government.

Proposition 6

Proposition 6 would pertain to the local government provisions of the constitution. Under the revised document, voters would be empowered to allow county commissioners to have ordinance-making power. If approved, the voters would also have the power to combine county offices, eliminate certain offices or increase the number of officers.

Proposition 7

Proposition 7 would pertain to revisions of general provisions of the constitution. Under the amendment, the quality of the environment in Texas is to be protected. The new document prohibits lotteries except for bingo.

Proposition 8

Proposition 8 pertains to the mode of amending the constitution.

It Rained And Poured On Eagles Friday as Rangers Took Win

It hadn't rained in Perryton since early August, but it poured on the Canyon Eagles Friday night as they suffered their most ignominious defeat of the season to the Rangers 28-0.

Well over an inch of rain fell throughout the game Friday night, but it didn't have the desire affect on the Rangers.

The Perryton win virtually eliminated Canyon from the district crown race this year, unless the Rangers lose to the Dumas Demons.

A rough Ranger offense proved it could score on the ground, rather than in the air, as it handed the Eagles the loss.

The Canyon team proved ineffective both offensively and defensively as the field became mired in mud.

While the teams were fairly evenly matched during the first half of the game, a half which saw sheets of water flow from the skies, the second half proved Canyon's downfall. Turn-overs from fumbles, inability to move and mistakes led to key Ranger offensive drives.

Canyon was held to only five first downs during the night, and only two of them were made the second half.

Perryton racked up 10 first downs during the night with six of them coming in the second half.

Perryton racked up 10 first downs during the night with six of them coming in the second half.

The Eagles wound up with 64 total yards while Perryton had 202 total yards, with 30 of them in the air, a turn-about for the pass-conscious Rangers.

Perryton threatened during the second quarter of the first half, taking the ball from their own 38 and moving on the ground to the 14 before being halted by the Eagle line. With 5:38 remaining in the half, Russ Reagan went back to kick a field goal but it was wide to the left and no good.

The second half got off to a bad start for Canyon. After receiving the kick-off at their own 22, the Eagles were penalized five yards before Quarterback Allen Shankles let the wet ball slip from his fingers with a Ranger recovery on the Canyon 17.

Brad Beck, son of the Perryton coach, took the ball up the center for five yards, Brent Pelcher was held for two yards, and then darted to the 8 for two more before Reagan lined his team up in field goal formation on a fourth down situation.

But, to the surprise and chagrine of the Eagles, Reagan held the ball and lofted his fifth pass of the night to Pelcher over the right side of the Eagle line for the first Perryton score. An extra point attempt was no good, and with 10:12 remaining in the quarter, the Rangers held a 6-0 margin.

On the ensuing kick-off, Canyon fumbled the ball on their own 43 yard line, giving the Rangers another scoring opportunity.

Moving the 43 yards in seven plays, the Rangers sent Beck over the left side of Canyon's line on a fourth down situation for the final 24 yards to paydirt with 6:28 left in the third quarter. This time, though, Reagan went to the air to hit Beck for a two-pointer and to give the Rangers a 14-0 lead.

The next Perryton score came midway through the final stanza after the Ranger defense held Canyon on a fourth down play at the Eagle 26-yard line.

Beck and Pelcher pounded the line for yardage and on a fourth down play, Beck went over the right side of the line for the final four yards. The kick by Reagan was good and with 4:22 remaining in the game the Rangers led 21-0.

Ricky Cooper, in for Shankles at quarterback for the Eagles, made a bad pitchout to Joe Luquette on the second play following the ensuing kick-off and a Ranger pounced on the ball to set up the final Perryton score.

Taking the ball from the 21, the Rangers moved in three plays to paydirt with the final 14 yards being covered by a Reagan pass to Darrell Baker. Again Reagan's kick was good and with 2:50 remaining the score stood at 28-0.

CB Business Meet Is Held

Buffalo Breakers CB Club members conducted a business meeting Thursday evening, Oct. 30, at fellowship hall of the First Christian Church in Canyon with Carl Miller, president, in charge.

Members and guests present discussed citizens band radio activities and voted as a group for major bases to monitor action on channel 13. Guidelines for monitoring the channel were discussed.

The group further discussed plans for a salad supper and fellowship meeting to be held Nov. 13 at the same site.

The supper is open to all persons interested in citizens band radio activities and will be a potluck affair with each participant asked to provide food for their own families, which will be spread together.

Canyon Senior Citizens were in the holiday spirit Thursday evening as the membership had special Halloween decorations for their weekly potluck supper, several were costumed for the evening, and they shared fellowship and games during the evening. Among those costumed were Helen Ruthart, seated, and standing from left, Paul Glovier, Ralph Ruthart, Mabel Carter, Kitty Metcalf and Flossie Johnston.

Fire Risk Said Great

Low humidity and high winds add up to an extremely high risk of grass fires now, Canyon fire official Joe Rice warned this week.

"The entire golden spread area is extremely vulnerable," Rice said. "And in Randall County we're exceptional because we have a lot of grass land. Some counties are predominately irrigated farmland."

Dry weather has brought the grass fire "season" on earlier this year, Rice said. Usually, he said, it is early December before the risk of grass fires is as high as it is now.

"Any time you have humidity down around 10 percent, like we've had lately, and the winds are as high as they are now, the chances are excellent for grass fires," Rice said. "What's hurt us this year is the lack of moisture."

He cautioned people to be extremely careful with outdoor fires and cited trash burning in rural areas as one of the most common ways for grass fires to start.

Metcalf Watching Hereford Gas Move

A move afoot within the Hereford city government to limit there the amount of cost that Pioneer Natural Gas Company can pass along to the customer is being closely watched by city officials in Canyon.

Panhandle cities on the Pioneer Gas Co. system presently allow the company to pass along to customers 100 percent of the cost to the company of purchasing natural gas.

However, Hereford, with an eye toward possible regulation, has recently submitted a list of questions to Pioneer and are waiting for answers before the matter is taken up by the city council.

"We are in the process of getting information from Pioneer now," Hereford city manager Dudley Baine said Friday, stressing that the city has taken no action yet.

But he explained why Hereford is reviewing the authorization to pass along 100 percent of the fuel costs.

"We feel we're just turning them loose with a check book," Baine said. "This doesn't force them to be prudent in gas purchases. There has to be a limit to what these gas companies can charge customers."

Canyon's city manager Glen Metcalf attended an informal meeting recently with city managers from Hereford, Plainview, Tulia, and engineering consultant Bill McMorries to discuss limiting the pass through rate.

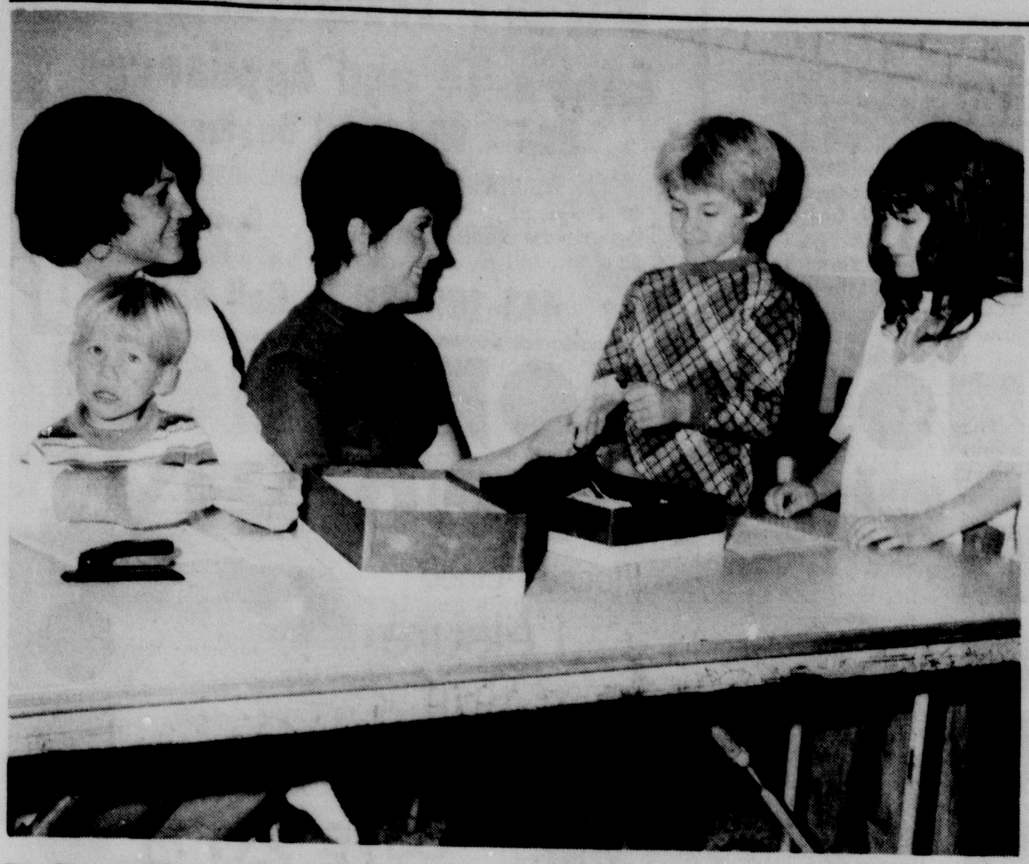
"We are most interested in this," he said. "We're going to maintain touch and follow it very closely."

About a year ago, Metcalf explained, after much discussion the West Texas Utilities Commission was formed by cities on the Pioneer system and Canyon, like the others, adopted an ordinance allowing Pioneer to pass along to the customer 100 percent of the cost of gas acquisition.

However, the authorization can be changed by repealing or amending the ordinance, Metcalf explained.

Hereford's decision, expected within the next few weeks, will be watched here.

"What steps they take and whether they are successful will undoubtedly affect what other cities do," Metcalf said.



Rex Reeves PTA members Peggy Svensson holding young son, Gregory, and Pat Howard were at the school this week to issue spaghetti supper tickets to students for the Nov. 6 event. Students Brett Hines and Misty Vars were among those picking up tickets to sell to parents and friends in the community. Tickets will also be available at the door the evening spaghetti is served.

Spaghetti Supper Thursday Is Rex Reeves Project

Spaghetti, salad, hot breads, dessert, and coffee or tea will be the feature of the evening on Thursday, Nov. 6, at the Rex Reeves Elementary School Parent-Teacher Association sponsors a communitywide spaghetti supper.

The supper will be served from 5-8 p.m. and tickets are presently on sale from students of the Rex Reeves Elementary School. Tickets are selling at $1.75 for adults and students or $1 for preschool children.

Proceeds will go to the continued beautification of Rex Reeves Elementary School through the playground and cafeteria projects of the PTA.

A special drawing will be held for the door prizes and the drawing will be held at 8 p.m. Ticket stubs will be drawn with the winner not required to be present to receive the following merchant donated items: A transistor radio, 8mm movie camera, men's jewel box, oil painting, pottery, potted plant arrangements, boxed stationery, wooden cup rack, caricature in oils and many more gift items.

Cartoon features for the children will be provided in the all-purpose room at the school during the evening. Admission to the "cartoon theatre" will be 10 cents per child.

Theft, Vandalism Are Investigated

A break-in and theft from a house under construction in Hunsley Hills was reported to Canyon police Monday.

An ornamental iron room divider, valued at $200, was reported stolen from a house being built at 24 Greenwood. Entry was apparently gained by forcing the back door open. The theft is believed to have taken place sometime after 8 p.m. on Sunday. It was discovered Monday morning.

Canyon police are also investigating a report of vandalism at the home of Myrtle L. Knorpp of 2501 12th Avenue.

A vehicle was apparently driven several times across the front yard of the home located on a corner lot, and a small tree was destroyed, according to the police report. The vandalism is believed to have taken place sometime after 11 p.m. on Friday.

Five Are Charged With Selling Drugs

Five persons charged with selling LSD, amphetamines and marijuana were arrested in Canyon Wednesday night as part of a three-county drug raid.

Canyon police, deputies from Randall, Potter and Deaf Smith counties, Amarillo city police and members of the Texas Alcoholic Beverage Commission took part in the operation that resulted in 12 arrests in Canyon, Amarillo and Childress.

In Canyon, the first arrest was made about 6:30 p.m. and the last man was picked up about 11 p.m., police chief Al Stewart reported.

Four Canyon residents were arraigned Wednesday night and Thursday morning on charges of delivering a controlled substance. Cash bonds of $10,000 were set for Michael Carl Dodson, 17, of 2631 12th Ave.; Kirk Edwin Schnack, 19, 1117 Creekmere; Larry Douglas Dirks, 25, 205 10th Ave.; and Klaus Henry Schaeffer, 23, of Schaeffer Trailer Park.

Charged with delivery of marijuana was Johnny Sanchez, 23, 107 28th St. Apt. 7. A $10,000 cash bond was also set for Sanchez.

The charges, all felonies, will be presented for action by the grand jury, which meets later this month.

A sixth man was charged in connection with the arrests. According to Stewart, Schaeffer was found hiding in a closet in a Canyon apartment and Frank Regis Halton, 28, of 1811 A 1st Ave. was charged with a misdemeanor count of hindering apprehension. A $500 personal recognizance bond was set.

The raid was a result of several weeks of investigation in the community by undercover agents, Stewart said.

City To Consider Zoning Changes

Two zoning changes will be considered in a public hearing conducted Monday night at 7 p.m. at the community center by the city commissioners.

Changes to be considered include rezoning block 10 in the Bomar addition from single family to multifamily and rezoning half of block 7 in the Heller addition from multifamily to commercial. Both sections are in the western portion of the city.

The commissioners will also call for a public hearing to consider recommendations by the planning and zoning board to rezone two other sections across the railroad tracks on the south side of 4th Avenue from single family to commercial.

City commissioners will also consider granting a 60-day extension on completion date for the civic complex due to some work changes that must be finished, and will discuss proposed changes in the sewer tap policy.

Mrs. Hudson Rites Friday

Graveside rites for Mrs. Mildred Hudson of Perryton were held at Dreamland Cemetery Friday afternoon following funeral services at Perryton Church of Christ that morning.

Mrs. Hudson, who died Oct. 28, was a native of Canyon and graduated from Canyon High School. She was a member of Perryton Church of Christ.

She is survived by her son, Dan Hudson of San Diego, Calif., two daughters, Mrs. Debi Dunkerson of Guyman, Okla. and Miss D'Lyn Hudson, a student at West Texas State University; brothers, Normal Clounch and Lester Clounch of Torrance, Calif., Ben Clounch of Palm Springs, Calif., and Leff Clounch of Los Angeles; sisters, Neva Miller of Plainview, Rilla Tucker of Canyon, and Audrey Elliott of Lubbock; and six grandchildren.

HD Council Plans Party For December

Randall County Home Demonstration Council members met Monday afternoon, Oct. 24, to discuss plans for an upcoming Holiday Party for home demonstration clubwomen during December.

Mrs. Bill West, council chairman, presided at the October meeting as final plans were discussed relating to the Halloween Carnival foods booth which the council sponsored Thursday evening.

Becky Hall, extension agent, was present at the meeting along with about 18 council members and club presidents. A THDA report was given by Marcie Grabber covering the discussions at the recent state meetings in Abilene.

Next meeting of the council is set for Nov. 24 at the Farm Bureau Building in Canyon with final plans for the Holiday Party on the agenda.

Man Jailed For DWI

An Amarillo man was sentenced to 30 days in jail and was fined $100 and court costs Friday after pleading guilty to a driving while intoxicated charge that resulted from an auto accident here.

Harvey Junior Sprankle, 42, of 1516 Beverly, was charged Thursday after his car struck the rear of an auto stopped on 23rd Street at a stop light at 2nd Avenue. The driver of the second car, Debra Dale Hilleary of 709 Foster Lane, was uninjured.

Sprankle was tried in county court before Judge Woody Pond.

bonds for construction of the new schools.

They have also received recommendations from two citizens committees that a new elementary school and a new high school be constructed in the north part of the district.

Other items on the Tuesday night agenda include the appointment of election judges for the bond election; a discussion of a recent Attorney General's opinion concerning student fees; and discussion of policy changes for students to be eligible to attend Canyon schools.

The board is scheduled to meet at 7 p.m. for its annual dinner and then convene in business session at about 8:30 p.m. at the school administration building.

personal income tax.

Sherman said the legislature has taken a great deal of criticism from many school districts in the state for passage of a two-year financing bill which places more burden for the costs of education on the local district.

Whatever happens in Tuesday balloting on a new constitution, though, Sherman said, the implied mandate of a U.S. Supreme Court ruling in the so-called Rodriquez case recently will be a guide for legislators when considering school financing.

"We'll have to go to the courthouse regardless of what happens (on Tuesday)," he said.

Sherman said the legislative action taken last spring on school financing was the result of the Rodriquez case and also of pressure from large city school districts, which have felt they have been paying a bulk of the taxes for state school financing.

Sherman said annual sessions, which would be mandated in the new constitution if passed by voters on Tuesday, could have saved Texas school districts millions of dollars two years ago when Gov. Dolph Briscoe refused to call a special legislative session after the regular session had failed to pass a school financing bill.

Responding to questions from the committee, Sherman said "nobody wants it" when asked about the possibility of a state income tax.

"The Governor will keep the lid on spending," he predicted. "I don't think there'll be one. The governor has control on the spending and he lined out $28 million last time."

Likewise, Sherman said he feels there'll be no new taxes levied as a result of the 1977 legislative session.

"You're going to see cuts in spending in several governmental areas next time," he predicted. "You'll see the appropriations committee in there looking with a fine pencil at where the money is going."

on Tuesday of a new state constitution by Texas voters.

One resolution, however, calls on the voters in Randall County to turn down the new proposed constitution while the other simply asks the voters to cast their ballots according to their individual consciences.

A West Texas State University government professor, Dr. Walter L. Shelly, called on commissioners in early October not to pass a resolution either for or against the Tuesday ballot issue.

Other items scheduled for the regular 1 p.m. Monday meeting of the commissioners include a discussion of refunding bonds for construction of the new county South Amarillo courthouse annex.

Bob Davis of Columbian Securities Corporation, financial advisor to the county, is expected to meet with commissioners to discuss the procedures for refunding more than $550,000 in certificates of obligation issued to make interim payments on the construction project.

The refunding program, according to Davis, should not require additional taxation.

Annual sick leave for county employees will also be examined by the commissioners.

Right Pattern Important

By BECKY HALL
County Extension Agent

Choosing the correct pattern type can help homesewers solve many of their own fitting problems.

But since several categories are available, choosing the right pattern type requires some personal analysis.

Pattern type relates to the figure type — not age. All major pattern companies base their pattern types and sizes on the same body measurements approved by the Measurement Standard Committee of the Pattern Fashion Industry.

To identify the correct pattern type for you, analyze your body build and compare it to the description for the pattern types in the back of pattern catalogs.

If you have an average, well-proportioned and developed figure (5'5"-5'6") choose "Misses" patterns. If you find that "Misses" patterns are almost right for you but too long waisted, choose "Miss Petite," designed for the shorter figure (5'2"-5'4").

Junior patterns are designed for well-proportioned, but somewhat shorter (5'4"-5'5") and generally more slender figures than the Misses. For the petite junior figure (5'-5'1"), select Junior Petite patterns.

Half size patterns are specifically designed for fully-developed but shorter waisted figures (5'2"-5'3"). For larger, more fully-mature figures (5'5"-5'6") Women's patterns are best.

Young Junior Teen is especially designed for the developing preteen and teen figure. These patterns, regardless of size, do not allow for much bust development. But if bust allowance is needed, larger sizes in this category should not be substituted for pattern sizes unavailable in other pattern categories.

Once you have identified your pattern type, select pattern numbers from that category in the size closest to your measurements. A few alterations may be needed to allow for figure irregularities, but fewer changes to obtain a perfect fit will be needed within the correct pattern category.

The Kitchen Sink

By SUSAN WILSON

D'Arcy woke up in a bad mood this morning: The dress she wanted to wear to kindergarten was dirty and everything else she has is ugly. She didn't like the way I fixed her hair, and she wanted to know why I always fixed such yucky breakfasts.

The baby must have agreed with her because she dumped her bowl of cereal in my lap (and on my last clean pair of jeans). Now she's screaming because she's hungry, but I've been busy mopping up the bathroom floor. The potty overflowed after she flushed 3 bars of soap, 1 washrag, and her toothbrush down.

It's only 7:30 a.m., so I can tell it's going to be one of those days.

On "One of those days," I cheer myself up by thinking about my Mother.

You see, when I was little and Daddy was working and going to school, Mother was "trapped" in a two-bedroom house with six kids ranging in age from newborn to seven years. Not much range for six kids.

Anyway — I think about Mom, and know that things here aren't nearly so bad. But I also remember that I had a very happy childhood. And Mother lived through it. And she had a sense of humor then, and she still does now. (I must admit that at age five I could not discern between a good-humored laugh and a hysterical one, but I can now and she's rarely hysterical.)

And, I must point out that of those six kids I was the most placid and well-behaved, which is bound to give you a clue about the rest of the family. I had four brothers. The term for them now would be "hyper-active," but back then they were just called naughty. And my sister was the baby, and as everyone knows even very good babies keep you busy.

The baby was in Mother and Dad's room, the rest of us were in one bedroom. My older brother in an upper bunk, I was in the lower, and the three other boys were in a double bed.

When the baby out-grew the baby bed, she slept with me. We had a screened back porch and a fenced back yard, and our house was always the gathering place for the neighborhood kids.

Eventually we moved into a larger house — leaving behind lots of memories:

Like the day my folks made three trips to the emergency room with three different kids for three different emergencies. Daddy told them to please not close — he still had half the brood at home.

The marvelous picnics in the backyard. Peanut butter and jelly sandwiches, and kool-aid on spread-out blankets and a very relaxed Mom. Chances are the dining table was hidden under ironing or other debris.

All six of us had the two-week measles together in that tiny house. Mom fixed chocolate soup. She says it was probably a mistake — she must have put too much milk in the pudding mix. But I loved it, and when my own kids aren't well, I make hot chocolate pudding with milk for their "chocolate soup".

I remember the rainy days when Mom "gave in" and just spent the day with us. Reading stories, playing cards, baking cookies, etc.

I guess what I'm saying is that I doubt if the house was ever clean. I really can't remember. Mom didn't let it bug her. What I do remember is that she was THERE. And relaxed, and fun to be with. I was a happy kid. Maybe I'm learning something about being a happy Mother. She did her best to teach me, anyway. And I love her.

Happy Birthday Mom.

Cooks Invited To Send Recipes To TDA Quarterly

Randall County cooks are invited to submit their favorite recipes for publication in the winter issue of TDA Quarterly, a Texas Department of Agriculture consumer-oriented magazine.

Recipes unique to the Plains area and old-time specialities will be stressed. However, any good recipe will be considered, Agriculture Commissioner John C. White said.

Since cattle are important to the Plains area, a special look out will be be kept for beef recipes.

In addition to recipes, old-time methods of food preservation in danger of disappearing will be printed. Anyone with tips from the past on preserving foods is invited to send them in, White said.

Deadline for submitting recipes and hints from the past will be Nov. 21.

TDA Quarterly takes a look at a specific region of Texas in each issue. It began publication this year.

Recipes and tips selected for publication will be credited to the sender. They will not be returned. They should be mailed to the Texas Department of Agriculture, Information Section, P.O. Box 12847, Austin, Texas 78711.

Sauerkraut Brewing For Annual Fest

Sauerkraut is brewing in the basement of the parish hall at Umbarger in preparation for the 23rd annual Umbarger Community German Sausage Festival to be held Nov. 9.

The kraut which was put in crocks several weeks ago to age is a tradition of the festival and will be served along with the traditional homemade sausage which will be stuffed into casings on Nov. 6, according to festival chairmen, James Skarke and Joe Grotegut.

Directing the kraut activities recently was Ben Koch and the sausage chairman for the festival is Johnnie Wieck.

Tickets for the feast will cost $3 for adults, $1.50 for children under 12, and pre-school will be fed at no charge. The traditional meal will consist of the famed German sausage, homemade bread, German kraut, green beans, and apple sauce. Homemade brownies will be served as dessert and the meal will be accompanied with either tea, coffee, milk or chocolate milk as preferred.

The festival was begun in 1952 as a project of St. Mary's Catholic Church parish and through the years has developed into a community-wide event. Last year 3800 adults and children's tickets were sold for the dinner and a large number of pre-schoolers went uncounted due to being served free.

Added features of the festival include a country store which offers a variety of homebaked goods for festival goers with Mrs. Max Hoffman as chairman for that event. Other festival features include the bazaar with gift items under the direction of Mrs. Joe Wieck; a raffle project to be handled by John Beckman; and a fishing pond for the youngest participants under the direction of Mrs. Elroy Artho.

The Country Store will be selling German sausage and kraut for patrons as well as sandwiches. The kraut will sell at $1.50 per pound and sausage will be $2.50 per pound at the Country Store.

The Young Country Sounds will provide dance music that evening at 8:30 p.m. to wrap up the festival events at the parish hall.

Proceeds from the annual event go toward upkeep on the church building. Local and area folks are invited to join the community for all the planned activities on Nov. 9.

Time Change For Supper

Canyon Senior Citizens are moving their weekly potluck supper hour to 6:30 p.m. since the recent time change.

Regular potluck supper meetings on Thursday evenings will continue to be held at Canyon Community Center until such time as the facilities of the new Senior Citizens Building are remodelled.

The Senior Citizens welcome any city and area residents of the age 55 and older to join them for any of their meetings. Games and fellowship follow each week's potluck supper session.

Christy Marrs helps her mother, Marion, steady a pine cone wreath which has been specially made for sale at the Nov. 14-15 "Arts Americana" bazaar to be sponsored by the Heritage Woman's Club. Mrs. Marrs, immediate past president of the club, also will be providing a special holiday wreath featuring calico and cornshucks, as well as a tote bag and gingham plant covers.
